1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an electrical connector assembly, more particularly to an electrical connector assembly which is configured with improved terminals therein. 2. Description of Related Art U.S. Pat. No. 8,225,920 issued to Su et al. on Sep. 17, 2012 discloses an electrical connector assembly which includes a housing defining a plurality of terminal receiving cavities. The housing defines a front mating surface and a rear mating surface. The terminal receiving cavities are arranged in a rearward row and a forward row along the rear mating surface. The terminal receiving cavities are arranged in an alternating order between the two rows. In the process of manufacturing the housing, the housing is assembled with a rear portion and the front mating surface of the housing is joined to the rear mating surface of the housing. However, the front mating surface of the housing and the rear mating surface of the housing need to be accurately positioned in order to be joined together. In addition, the housing and the terminal receiving cavities need to be designed with sufficient width in order to allow for accurate positioning of the front mating surface of the housing and the rear mating surface of the housing. An improved electrical connector assembly is desired.

Molecular cloning and expression of mouse interleukin-3. The expression of interleukin-3 (IL-3) was studied in the mouse. A cDNA for mouse IL-3 was isolated from a murine M1 carcinoma-derived cDNA library by immunoscreening with antiserum against mouse IL-3. The cDNA consisted of an open reading
