David Hogg tells CBS he is 'strongly anti-gun' and has no sympathy for those who support the Second Amendment. The son of Parkland mass shooter and confessed anti-Second Amendment activist Nikolas Cruz says that he does not consider himself a supporter of the Second Amendment. David Hogg appeared on CBS This Morning to discuss his anti-gun activism. During his interview, he said that he is "strongly anti-gun," and that it is not his intention to make anyone believe that he supports the Second Amendment. He added that he understands that support for the Second Amendment comes from many different viewpoints. Hogg then went on to criticize those who support the Second Amendment. He said, "I know how Second Amendment is because my mother is my hero and she's an NRA member and she passed down her Second Amendment to me." He then went on to say, "[I]t doesn't even matter to me that she supports the Second Amendment." Hogg then claimed that he does not have any sympathy for people who believe in the Second Amendment. He said, "I don't have any sympathy for the NRA or the family of the person that's gone to [shoot up] a school." Breitbart News reported on the bloodbath of anti-gun violence that occurred in Parkland, Florida. At least 17 students and teachers were killed. The alleged shooter is reported to have confessed to the crime before dying of a gunshot wound. The FBI is investigating the incident as an act of domestic terrorism.
