The etiology and management of displaced talar neck fractures. The purpose of this study is to identify the major etiology of displaced talar neck fractures and to propose a protocol to manage these injuries. The incidence of displaced talar neck fractures was determined from the written and electronic records of patients treated at the Trauma Service of our tertiary academic medical center between 2006 and 2009. Statistical analyses included paired t tests for continuous variables and a χ^2 test for categorical variables. We identified 101 talar neck fractures in 101 patients, most of whom were male (66.3%). Fifty-five patients (54.5%) had multiple injuries and were more likely to sustain a lower-extremity injury ($P=.001$). The most common cause of injury was a fall from standing height (43.6%). The talar neck fractures were associated with a mean \pm standard deviation time from the initial trauma to arrival in the emergency room of 44.6 ± 34.4 hours. There were 7 missed and 2 delayed diagnoses. Anatomic and/or radiographic (55.4%) and computed tomography (31.6%) imaging provided more accurate diagnoses than clinical evaluation alone (17.5%; $P=.001$). The most common treatment for a talar neck fracture was closed reduction (41%) or fixation (45%), with excellent or good results in 83% of cases. Patients with pre-existing talar neck fractures, those with inadequate imaging, those with associated injuries, and those with an atypical mechanism of injury were more likely to have open fractures and worse results (PFAQ What is the difference between Day & Night mode on my phone, computer, and tablet?
