1. Field of the Invention

This invention relates to a fine dust collecting apparatus for generating an electrically charged particle by corona discharge.

2. Description of the Prior Art

A fine dust collecting apparatus for collecting a fine particle, for example, a dust particle having a size not more than 10.μm, and an electrically charged particle, for example, a positive ion or a negative ion by corona discharge has been employed in the semiconductor industry and the like. The fine dust collecting apparatus includes a pair of electrodes, and a cleaning liquid is supplied to a gap between the electrodes to cause corona discharge in the gap, to thereby generate a fine dust and an electrically charged particle in the cleaning liquid. However, the fine dust collecting apparatus having the above-mentioned structure suffers from the following disadvantages. (a) The fine dust and the electrically charged particle are generated in the cleaning liquid. Thus, the fine dust collecting apparatus has a complicated structure for retaining the cleaning liquid. (b) Since the fine dust and the electrically charged particle in the cleaning liquid are moved by the flow of the cleaning liquid in the cleaning liquid reservoir, a large amount of cleaning liquid must be supplied to the fine dust collecting apparatus. (c) Since the fine dust and the electrically charged particle are moved by the flow of the cleaning liquid, the fine dust and the electrically charged particle are scattered and hence the fine dust and the electrically charged particle are often adhered to the inner surface of the fine dust collecting apparatus. (d) The concentration of the fine dust or the electrically charged particle in the cleaning liquid is lowered due to the scattering of the

in Southern Germany closed and switched to cheaper, non-PC based games. Games Technology Group, the German firm that owns the factory in Kassel, shut the factory down and moved to Lithuania. The company claims that this move will save it €35 million over the next three years, partly by reducing production costs. The company believes that the current recession and the fact that gaming is seen as less valuable to the economy, will see a decline in the gaming market over the coming years. The company is offering up to €3,000 in compensation to games developers in its portfolio that lose their jobs, but this is expected to be of limited benefit. The announcement by the company is the latest in a series of high profile job losses in the games industry. Over the past few years, major companies such as Electronic Arts and THQ have announced job losses, either as part of restructures or reductions in their workforces. Some of the company's top titles include Hitman Absolution and Cry

Speaking of a class of women dedicated to teaching "how to be a lady" this description comes to mind: The purpose of the Home Demonstration Association was to teach housewives "how to do it themselves" in order to gain economy and save money in doing housework, such as dusting, cooking and sewing. Its members believed that women could have a cleaner, more economical home if they learned to manage their own household expenses and budgets. Without getting into gender politics, I want to note that this class was described by the same newspaper article as "the Auxiliary Class" in the 1930s. When I looked at the history of my own local Fire Department Auxiliary, they were called "the Ladies Auxiliary." Funny thing is, this same article also describes the "auxiliary class" of men as "mostly retired." I'm not sure if it was an oversight or just a dig at the women, but anyway, my community's fire department had a much higher percentage of men in the auxiliary than I have seen in some other communities. Also, my husband is on the board of the local auxiliary, so I am definitely "in the know." :-) I have been going to the local church Ladies Auxiliary for over 15 years now. Every year we do a family fun day where we learn something new about sewing, cooking, baking, etc. My friends and neighbors, mostly women, can't wait to join us and bring their kids. We teach them a skill while having fun doing it. All content posted on this site is the responsibility of the party
