I use this transaction manager to handle database transactions: In my application, I have many threads that use the same transactionManager to perform database updates, and this works well. However, I have also a scheduler in my application that deletes some database entries at the end of each day. That scheduler is supposed to be running from a random thread, not from one of the application threads. I suspect that this could break hibernate transactions because it seems that hibernate ignores the thread on which the database deletion is performed and starts the transaction on a different thread than the one where it was supposed to be started. Does anybody have an idea of how to get hibernate to perform the deletion from the same thread as it was originally supposed to? A: Yes, you have to take into account that the database may have concurrent accesses and that the deletion
