That marbled potato and cheese dish is, you know, so much fun! I'm rarely a fan of things that are just potato, but this is my favorite potato dish by far. I don't even like potatoes that much either, but this is just so amazing. I'm so happy to find this recipe, in fact, I made it for my family for Thanksgiving. Everyone loved it, and I couldn't believe how quick and easy it was to put together. It makes a delicious, seasonal side dish and a perfect centerpiece for dinner, too. The recipe calls for white potatoes, but I find that I can cook a much larger amount of potatoes without them burning, so I use sweet potatoes here. They do the job just as well, and this dish is so delicious, I'd suggest trying it with potatoes, too. I use a blend of Cheddar and Monterey Jack, but you can use any blend that you like. The key is to add the cheeses before the potatoes are done cooking. You don't want the cheese to melt, but just heat through and melt in the mouth. A Note on Natural and Organic Ingredients I chose to include this because it just so happens to be one of the goals for our farm this year. Our goal is to be a sustainable farm, and to promote local food and sustainable farms and homesteads. When I think of sustainable farming, I think of things such as: Controlling pests with rotational planting, and using environmentally friendly practices, such as crop rotation Healthy soil through conservation techniques and other sustainable practices Promoting natural systems that protect our land, rather than man-made ones Ways to deal with pests Over the years, I have developed a number of ways to deal with pests, depending on what crops I am growing and what pests are around. For example, to control pests on corn, I have used: My tomatoes have really taken off this year. I keep the plant pretty small, and usually I just use a single tomato plant. It's a lot of fun and it's a good thing that I don't like tomatoes very much! Tomato plants are easy to grow. They are actually pretty easy to start from seed, and I usually do that. I plant them in a pot in spring, and just place them in my garden. The best thing about growing tomatoes from seed is that you get the chance to choose different varieties. You can check out

Severe hypoglycaemia in patients with type 2 diabetes treated with continuous subcutaneous insulin infusion. Increasing numbers of patients treated with continuous subcutaneous insulin infusion (CSII) to maintain a tight glycaemic control present an atypical clinical picture associated with severe hypoglycaemia, long-lasting or recurrent symptoms, and impaired quality of life. Patients affected by diabetes have a higher prevalence of autonomic neuropathy (AN) and behavioural alterations, with the highest prevalence in those who had already had a severe hypoglycaemic event. AN is associated with more severe hypoglycaemia events and with more difficult glycaemic control. In the present study the authors reviewed the management of a series of 33 patients with type 2 diabetes treated with CSII to analyse their characteristics and to evaluate the frequency of severe hypoglycaemia and the subsequent time spent by patients on insulin pumps. Thirty-three patients with type 2 diabetes treated with CSII from one clinic were evaluated. A questionnaire was administered to patients to collect the following information: presence of severe hypoglycaemia in the previous 12 months and in the previous year; presence of hypoglycaemia-related symptoms of the previous 12 months; maximum recorded blood glucose levels during the previous 3 months; percentage of time in hypoglycaemia in the previous 3 months; and frequency of meals consumed by patients. An analysis was also performed of the percentage of patients treated with bolus insulin plus one or more of the following supplements: oral antidiabetic agents (OAD), CSII, and multiple injections of insulin. The mean age of patients was 48.3 ± 13.9 years and the mean duration of diabetes was 8.9 ± 5.6 years. The number of hypoglycaemia-related symptoms was 0.6 ± 0.5. Severe hypoglycaemia had been reported by four patients (12.1%) over the previous 12 months. The mean blood glucose level was 186.3 ± 45.8 mg/dl and the mean duration of hypoglycaemia episodes was 28.1 ± 8.4 min. The percentage of time spent by patients in hypoglycaemia was $7.0 \pm 6.2\%$. The mean percentage of hypoglycaemia was the highest during nocturnal fasting ($9.9 \pm 8.9\%$). One hundred and twenty-six of the total number of meals consumed by patients were evaluated, showing that protein (36.5%) was the most frequent. OAD and CSII were found
